LSN Celebrates Survivorship

NOVEMBER 1, 2006 — The Second Annual Stavros S. Niarchos Prize for Survivorship ceremony was held in New York City at the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts in New York City. This year, four prizes were awarded in recognition of outstanding efforts to alleviate suffering and promote resilience among victims of war, violence, civil strife and terrorism.

Muppets Teach Children about Landmines in Afghanistan

Did you know that in more than 80 countries around the world, landmines pose a deadly threat to children? Children make up about 20% of the estimated 15,000-20,000 people killed or disabled annually by these lethal weapons.

Muppets, which have taught countless children basic lessons such as counting and the alphabet, are now also teaching children in Afghanistan a vital lesson about landmines that could be the difference between life and death.
